VOLUME 3 NUMBER 5 TRINITY COLLEGE, HARTFORD, CONNECTICUT FEBRUARY, 1973

WAY BACK WHEN—Out of the College archives comes this photograph of Trinity's Long Walk, taken circa 1880, when Seabury, Northam Towers and Jarvis were spanking new, before the elm trees or ivy were planted, before the grazing land became the Quad. The picture is part of an exhibition in the College Library depicting various stages in the College's history. Prepared by College Archivist Peter J. Knapp '65, the exhibit began Jan. 15 and runs through June 1. Remaining displays, which change every two weeks, are: student organizations

(March 12-25); sports (March 26-April 8); Jarvis Physics Lab, Boardman Hall and Alumni Hall (April 9-22); Trinity's chapels (April 23-May 6); Trinity's libraries (May 7-20); and Trinity's presidents and faculty (May 21-June 1). If that picture above doesn't seem rustic to you, consider this note from Professor Glenn Weaver's History of Trinity College: In 1878, twelve students formed a lawn tennis club, setting up a court at the south end of the new campus, "and a rope was put up to keep out the cows which were pastured on the college grounds."

A Look Beyond the Traditional

By EDWIN P. NYE
Dean of the Faculty

Non-traditional Study. Alternate Approaches for the Delivery of Higher Education. These phrases, fast growing in importance, are part of the language educators use when they probe new possibilities for higher education.

State-wide and nationally, committees have been formed whose task, figuratively speaking, is to survey the area outside the circle of higher education and to suggest ways the circle can be expanded to include new kinds of students, new kinds of programs, new teaching technology.

Trinity, through several programs initiated over the past few years, has already begun to chart her course through this expanding educational universe. Some of the College's "non-traditional" programs, such as the Freshman Seminar, the Open Semester, the Intensive Study Program, or student-taught courses are already "old stuff." The Individualized Degree Program, which enrolls its first students this semester, even more clearly expresses Trinity's commitment to explore the "non-traditional," and shows also where Trinity departs from certain aspects of non-traditional study.

Last December, the State Committee on Alternate Approaches for the Delivery of Higher Education reported back its findings and recommendations to the State Commission for Higher Education, mentioning Trinity's IDP in several instances as one of the unique new programs in the state.

On a broader scale, the national Commission on Non-Traditional Study, co-sponsored by the College Entrance Examination Board and the Educational Testing Service, recently completed its study which is expected to be fairly influential over the next few years. Its basic recommendation is that "the oft-stated American goal of full educational opportunity should be made realistically available and feasible for all who may benefit from it, whatever their condition of life."

Of this commission's 58 proposals about half directly pertain to the philosophy or mechanics of the IDP. The ones which don't, either fall under state jurisdiction, are beyond Trinity's means to accomplish (for example, satellite broadcasting), or go against Trinity's educational purpose.

Trinity's IDP is an alternative means of earning the regular bachelor's degree which bypasses the regular course-credit system and relies instead on completion of "study units" and specific projects. The IDP can be completed in three to 10 years, and it is expected that the bulk of the IDP students will be non-resident older persons.

Two freshmen have enrolled in the IDP, Susan Thorn of Elkhart, Ind., and Henry Holz of Norwalk, Ohio. The non-resident applicants to the program currently range in age from 22 to 68, and include people with no college experience to up to two years of college.

Beyond making the college degree available to more people the IDP meets other commission criteria such as providing "flexible arrangements" for study, giving students of traditional college age the right to join the program, and, on the other hand, not denying students the option of staying within the traditional academic framework.

Two other commission recommendations which are emphasized in Trinity's IDP are that each institution should "relate such a (non-traditional) program to its whole process of curriculum development," and that programs should be absorbed "into the normal process of degree-granting instead of keeping it an ancillary part of their total program."

In regard to the first point, the academic requirements of the Trinity IDP have been developed through faculty committees and individual departments, with great care taken to insure that the IDP student is evaluated by the same rigorous standards that apply under the regular curriculum. The second point illustrates one area in which Trinity's IDP is far ahead of other programs; the recommendation indicates that most existing "non-traditional" programs are in fact external degree programs which need to be absorbed into the regular program. Trinity's IDP from the start has offered the regular bachelor's degree.

In addition, it is expected that Trinity's IDP students will make use of the resources of the College as they pursue their studies. The regular course offerings, while not required, are available for IDP students; use of the library; attendance at special lectures and programs, and consultations with faculty members, are generally expected of IDP students.

May 16 Gift Deadline is Nearing

With Charter Day only a few months away, Trinity's Annual Giving Campaign is at 68 percent of the $475,000 goal, according to Judson M. Rees, director of development.

So far, the College has received 2,029 gifts and pledges totalling $320,989. Of these, 490 donors are new contributors, including 346 alumni, 113 parents, 18 classified as Friends and 13 from business or industry.

The campaign is making better progress than last year's successful drive, Rees said. At this time last year, the campaign was at 64 percent of the $425,000 goal, but ended in June at $440,421, or 104 percent of that goal.

For Trinity's 150th anniversary year the goal was increased $50,000.

Because this is the anniversary year, Rees said, it is especially important that the drive be completed by Charter Day on May 16, and he urged donors not to delay in making their gift, so it can be received in time.

CAMPUS NOTES

JAMES L. WEST, Instructor in History, is leading a group of 40 Trinity students and faculty on a tour of the Soviet Union during Spring vacation. The trip will include visits to Moscow, Leningrad, and Kiev, and is generally open only to students who have studied Russian History. Combined with a series of unofficial seminars on Soviet politics, economics and history, the trip will be a form of "total immersion" in a culture with which the students have become vicariously familiar through their studies.

JOHN H. WOOLLEY, administrator and technical director of the Austin Arts Center, attended the convention of the United States Institute for Theatre Technology held in St. Louis, Missouri, March 11-14. Convention topics included administration of theatres, new products and techniques in development for theatre use.

Dr. HUGH S. OGDEN, assistant professor of English, read his own poetry and that of Robert Hayden and Theodore Roethke in February at St. James Church in Glastonbury. The reading, part of the first annual Ecumenical Arts Festival, was sponsored by seven local churches.

Mrs. MILLIE SILVESTRI, assistant director of the News Bureau, has been invited to serve as a member of the Industry Looks at Art Committee for the 1973 Greater Hartford Civic and Arts Festival. She will also serve as the liaison with Trinity so that the college may assist and participate in the festival where possible.

RIEL S. CRANDALL, director of buildings and grounds, attended the meeting of the Association of Physical Plant Administrators for the Eastern Region in New York City on January 24-26. He was chairman of the January 26 session which dealt with ecological problems.

The Trinity faculty wives sponsored a lecture and exhibit of handwoven dolls of many lands by Miss Marion Anderson, who is associated with the Lutz Junior Museum of Manchester. Officers for the Faculty Wives Group are Mrs. RAMONA DOTEN and Mrs. JOANN WILLIAMS, Co-Chairwomen, and Mrs. VERONICA PEDEMONTI, Treasurer.

Two juniors, CYNTHIA J. HAWKINS, from Darien, and BRIAN R. McELENY, from Natick, Mass., are attending the National Theatre Institute at the Eugene O'Neill Theatre Center in Waterford, Conn. The Institute, made possible through a grant from the Rockefeller Foundation, offers a rigorous 15-week resident program. Included in the program are nine weeks of intensive studio work in theatre with professional staff and guest artists in acting, directing, costume design, scene design, movement, voice, puppetry and dance, as well as special seminars and individual student projects. Trinity is one of many colleges and universities participating in the program including Amherst, Bennington, Dartmouth, Middlebury, Smith, Vassar, Wellesley, Wesleyan and Williams.

An article by Dr. ROBERT B. OXNAM, assistant professor of history and special assistant to the president, appeared in the "Journal of Asian Studies" in February. Entitled "Policies and Institutions of the Ohio Regency, 1661-1669," it is a study of the conflict between Manchu-oriented government and the strong traditions of Chinese state and culture during the early part of the Ch'ing period (1644-1912).

Dr. CLYDE D. McKEE JR., associate professor of political science, attended a joint conference of The American Institute of Architects, American Institute of Planners and The Connecticut Chapter of The American Society for Public Administrators, held at Albertus Magnus College in New Haven. The conference was devoted to land use planning, Connecticut's plan for conservation and development and The Greater Hartford Process.

JOHN A. DANDO, professor of English, delivered a convocation address at Sacred Heart College and an address to the Connecticut branch of the College of Surgeons. He also recently completed a film on Shakespeare.

President LOCKWOOD has been elected a member of the board of directors of the Association of American Colleges, a national organization of 800 liberal arts colleges. He is one of 13 directors of the AAC. His term expires in 1977. For the past three years he has served as a member of the AAC's Commission on Institutional Affairs; in 1971 he was vice chairman and in 1972, chairman.

The AAC was chartered in 1915 to promote "higher education in all its forms in the colleges of liberal arts and sciences." With more than 80 per cent of its membership comprised of private institutions such as Trinity, the AAC is recognized as the leading spokesman for private higher education on the national scene. The AAC maintains a professional staff with offices in Washington, D.C.

HARRY O. BARTLETT, director of administrative services, will attend the annual conference of the Eastern Region of the College and University Personnel Association in New York City. Also, he has been appointed to the West Hartford Board of Managers of the Y.M.C.A. and Chairman of the World Service Committee.

Ms. ELLEN MULQUEEN, associate dean for student services, has been appointed to the nominations committee of the Association of College Unions-International. She was also appointed chairman of a special committee on travel of the ACU-I.

Rabbi KALMEN ROSENBAUM has been appointed counselor of the B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation at Trinity. He hopes to help Hillel meet its present main goal, which is the establishment of Kosher eating facilities on campus.

Dr. RICHARD A. SHIPE, assistant professor of education, will deliver a paper March 26 in Detroit at the annual meetings of the National Association for Research in Science Teaching and the National Science Teachers Association. Entitled "The ability of non-college bound biology students to identify and apply selected 'principles' in biology," it deals with concept learning at the higher cognitive levels.

A publication entitled "Charge Transport through the Cadmium-Selenium Interface" prepared by Dr. AUGUST E. SAPEGA, chairman and professor of engineering and Professor H.P.D. Lanyon of Worcester Polytechnic Institute appeared in "physica status solidi." Also accepted for publication is an article entitled "Measurement of Semiconductor Junction Parameters Using Lock-In Amplifiers" for the May 1973 publication "IEEE Transactions on Electron Devices."

BROOKE GREGORY, instructor in the Physics Department, was promoted to assistant professor effective November of 1972. He has also completed the requirements for his Ph.D. from Brown.

Dr. CHARLES B. SCHULTZ, assistant professor of education, was represented in the winter issue of "Instruction Science: An International Journal" with an article entitled "A System of Cognitive Stimulation in Instructional Strategies."

Another paper entitled, "The Usefulness of Cumulative Deprivation as an Explanation of Educational Deficiencies," was selected for reprinting in the yearbook, "Annual Progress in Child Psychiatry and Child Development-1972."

JONATHAN B. REILLY, organist and instructor of music, gave a recital on the new organ in the chapel January 19. It included works by J. S. Bach, Brahms, Alan Stout, Dupre, Widor, Messiaen, and Franck. A Hartford Times critic called the concert "impressive," and said that Reilly "demonstrated a high degree of technical ability and command of the instrument...and a very acceptable degree of virtuosity, with commendable clarity of articulation."

Laurel Vlock's WTHN-TV program, "Dialogue" featured four Trinity faculty and administration members over a recent two-week period. Dr. SAMUEL HENDEL, chairman and professor of political science, and Dr. GARY C. (see NOTES, page 4)

BANNERS FOR CHAPEL — Anne M. Warrington '75 stands framed by the 30-foot banners she made for the Chapel this year. The seven pairs of banners represent antiphons from the Advent hymn, "O Come, O Come Emmanuel," and were hung in the Chapel during the Advent season. They are made of 45-inch strips of cotton materials, dyed royal purple, the Advent color. The designs, which Miss Warrington created, include a crown superimposed on a dove of peace (representing the King of Peace); a lamp of wisdom; a rose; a harp; carpentry tools representing Joseph; a lily representing Mary; the Latin acronym IHS representing Jesus, and the Key of David, a reference to Jesus' royal lineage. Miss Warrington, a Roman Catholic, is also the first woman sacristan at the Chapel, one of three sacristans who help Chaplain Alan Tull in preparing the silver and linen used in Chapel services. She also attends Mass at St. Lawrence O'Toole Church on New Britain Avenue. Different banners are hung in the Chapel at other seasons of the church year.

Budget Balanced in '72; Treasurer Is Optimistic

The College ended its last fiscal year with a balanced budget, and projections are that "reasonably balanced" operating budgets will be possible for the next year or two, according to J. Kenneth Robertson, treasurer.

In his report on the 1971-72 fiscal year, Robertson noted this is the second consecutive year the College has had a balanced budget since it suffered a cumulative $400,000 deficit between 1968 and 1970.

A $935,845 increase in the total operating income was the result, Robertson said, of an increase in the size of the student body, an increase in the rate of tuition and fees, and a "modest improvement" in the endowment income.

Total expenditures and transfers in 1971-72 were $8,657,439, up from $7,719,646 in 1970-71. Of the $8.6 million, $8.3 million came from tuition, endowment and investment income, and from other operations; the balance of more than $300,000 was contributed by alumni and parents.

Robertson noted, "expenses continue to rise as inflation takes its toll. The goods and services purchased annually to develop and maintain the educational program of the College cost predictably more in dollars each year. Annual salary increments for the faculty and the other members of the College community demand ever more dollars by definition. Necessary repairs and replacements for the physical plant and equipment can no longer be deferred and must be budgeted at an accelerating rate for the next several years."

Robertson predicted that "for the next year or two we should be able to continue to operate with a reasonably balanced budget. Beyond that point our vision and our projections become uncertain and cautious. Too many factors are now leaving the comfortable area of straight-line extrapolations and become subject to quantum leaps of unpredictable magnitude and direction," he said.

In addition, Robertson said, there are "serious challenges to the continued productive health of this College" contained in the current political and social climate.

Among these challenges, he said, are "a growing, but ill-considered threat of taxation, which could prove fatal to private institutions in this state and this country; a recent disenchantment with, and antagonism toward, the entire educational enterprise and its performance; the continuing threat of inflation to service-oriented and labor-intensive organizations, such as schools and colleges, and the frightening proliferation of new laws, requirements, reports, law suits, bureaucracy and red tape which remove from the educational mainstream an increasing proportion of funds, manpower, and attention."

Robertson said that in spite of these trends, he doesn't subscribe to the view "that services such as health care and education can no longer be delivered by private institutions without substantial governmental support and subsidy."

R.F. Burton '28 Gives $50,000 For Scholarship

A 1928 graduate of the College and his wife have given $50,000 to the College for scholarships, it was announced by President Lockwood.

The $50,000 endowment is the gift of Raymond F. Burton '28, and Mrs. Frances E. Burton. Mr. Burton is the owner and president of Faxon Engineering Company, Inc., of West Hartford. The first scholarship will be awarded in September.

Burton

Burton became secretary and assistant treasurer of the Faxon Engineering Company in 1946, and president and owner in 1961. Faxon Engineering Company is a distributor of industrial equipment and supplies.

He and Mrs. Burton live on a 135-acre farm in East Canaan, where he breeds and shows Morgan horses. They are rebuilding the farm's 1812 homestead, which was destroyed by fire several years ago.

Commenting on the gift, President Lockwood said "Mr. Burton's generosity towards Trinity is deeply appreciated, and we thank him on behalf of future Burton Scholars. It is especially gratifying when an alumnus chooses to remember his alma mater in this way."

Trinity Begins Exchange With East Anglia

Trinity students will be able to spend their junior year studying at the University of East Anglia in Norwich, England, under an exchange program beginning this year.

Each year, two Trinity students will be able to attend the university's School of English and American Studies; one East Anglia student will spend an academic year at Trinity between his second and third university years.

The University of East Anglia is one of the group of seven new universities established in England during the early 1960's. Its various schools are units that are considerably larger and wider in their fields of study than the traditional departments of a university.

Trinity participates in several other student exchange programs, including the 12-College Exchange, Trinity College in Quezon City, The Philippines, cross-registration program of the Greater Hartford Consortium for Higher Education, and cooperates with other institutions.

There are 64 members of the Founders Society (gifts of $1,000 or more), or 10 more than last year this time. Of these, 22 are new members. The Anniversary Club ($150 to $999) has 460 members at this time, up 153 from last year. Of these 227 are new members.

Alumni contributions are at $189,665, with 1,559 alumni responding. This puts the Alumni Fund at 69 percent of the anticipated $275,000 goal.

From The Board of Fellows

TO THE TRINITY REPORTER:

The Board of Fellows at its meeting of February 10, 1973 took the following actions in which you may be interested.

1. It reaffirmed its earlier resolution that the Trustees and the Alumni Association be urged to place women on the Board of Fellows as soon as possible. It also instructed me, as Chairman of the Fellows, to write the Trustees and request that they fill as promptly as possible the existing vacancy of a Senior Fellow with a woman.

2. The Board adopted a resolution urging the College to step up efforts to recruit women on the faculty.

3. It adopted a resolution urging the Trustees to drop its absolute requirement that the College have a minimum of 1,000 male students and urging the Trustees instead to impose upon the Admissions Department the obligation to structure its recruiting activities in such a way that the College will have approximately a 60% male-40% female student body selected insofar as possible on a nondiscriminatory basis.

4. The Board agreed to hold its annual mid-winter meeting (commencing next year) for a full day during the "work-week" while the College is in session so that the Fellows may become more familiar with the functioning of the College and may meet and discuss matters of interest with students in other than formal Board meetings.

5. The Board's next meeting will be on Saturday, May 19, 1973. One half of that meeting will be devoted to discussions and reports by our committee headed by Peter Nash which deals with current student affairs; and the other half will deal with discussions and reports by our committee headed by Ned Montgomery which deals with a furtherance of the academic excellence of the College.

Please feel free to contact any member of the Board for further information or suggestions respecting the Board's work.

Sincerely yours
David Booth Beers
Chairman

TWO ALUMNI TOURS

1) A week-long stay in London leaving November 1. Cost: $239 includes airfare, first class hotel, breakfasts and more.

2) A two week trip to Eastern Europe (Budapest, Vienna, Prague and Amsterdam). Cost: $899 (plus $20 for visa fees and airport taxes) includes most meals and daily excursions. This trip is also open to parents.

Those interested in either trip should write the Alumni Office for more details.

BOOK REVIEW

BLACK COMPANY: THE STORY OF SUBCHASER 1264

By Eric S. Purdon '35

Robert B. Luce, Inc. 1972
255 pages; $6.95

Reviewed by Edward W. Sloan, III
Associate Professor of History

Why history? What purpose does it serve? Among many answers, which we historians often supply in hasty defense of our livelihood, one is that history serves to explain how we became what we are today; thus history, in this instance, views the past through the eyes of the present rather than considering the past on its own terms. Such a viewpoint often arises from the need to explain, excuse, or justify ourselves as products of our past. This assures the continual appearance of historical accounts which, regardless of any other merits, are notable for their relevance to our contemporary concerns.

In command of the subchaser and immediately responsible for this experiment was Lieutenant Eric Purdon, the author of this book, then a thirty-year-old officer entrusted with a task whose formidable nature contrasted strikingly with the modest dimensions and career of his vessel. His story is one of success.

Such an historical essay is BLACK COMPANY. This is the story of the U.S.S. PC 1264, a subchaser whose relatively brief naval service from 1943 to 1946 is remarkable for one distinguishing characteristic: by design and sharply against all precedent her enlisted crew was entirely black. Surmounting deeply imbedded racial stereotypes and an all-too-durable naval tradition that blacks could serve only as stewards or in some comparably menial capacity, a cautious if not apprehensive Navy Department in 1943 manned a destroyer escort and a subchaser with blacks in order to test those assumptions which for so long had relegated blacks to a limited and inferior role in the United States Navy.

The subchaser may have seen only limited action, and then primarily in Atlantic coastal waters and in the Caribbean, but it was enough to give an affirmative answer to the questions which had inspired this effort — could blacks be entrusted with responsibility? Could they work effectively and on a basis of equality with whites? Could black enlisted men take orders from black petty officers, let alone a black commissioned officer? Starting initially with only white officers to command the carefully selected fifty-man, all-black enlisted crew, the PC 1264 gradually but steadily evolved into not only a remarkably efficient ship but also one where with distinction blacks assumed authority and responsibility up through the non-commissioned officer level. Finally this was achieved at the commissioned officer level as well, when in May, 1945, Ensign (now Rear Admiral) Samuel Gravely was assigned to the ship.

With disarming brevity (especially when considering his exhaustive research) Mr. Purdon relates the varying fortunes of his vessel and her determined crew. His frequently understated account reveals a lively sense of compassion and a gift for re-creation. Both readable and reasonable, BLACK COMPANY does what I believe all historical works should do — inform, entertain, and enlighten.

JACOBSON, instructor in political science, discussed "Affirmative Action—what does it mean—who does it affect?" In another program, Dr. MICHELE TOOMEY, assistant professor of psychology, and Mrs. PAULA I. ROBBINS, director of career counseling, questioned whether or not women were a deprived minority.

Ms. CHASE TWICHELL, a senior English major, was one of four Connecticut Student Poets to give readings during February at Trinity, which was the first of eight schools on the poet's tour. The four students were chosen by the selection committee of the Connecticut Poetry Circuit last fall, following competitions held at colleges throughout the state.

A petition drive was conducted through most of February by students from Trinity and other Connecticut colleges for the support of ConnPIRG, the Connecticut Public Interest Research Group. The students hope to gain support for a new activity fee that would help ConnPIRG direct work for public research done by students in environmental preservation, consumer protection, race age, and sex discrimination, and corporate and government responsibility. Ralph Nader's Citizen Action Group provides advice to the group.

ALFRED C. BURFEIND, director of the college News Bureau, has been elected chairman of the Department of Communication and Interpretation of the Connecticut Council of Churches and serves as a member of the Council's Board of Directors.

Dr. DONALD D. HOOK, associate professor of modern languages, is one of eight authors of a new cultural reader, "Kultur and Alltag," published in January by Charles Scribner's Sons. A book review by Dr. Hook also appeared in the November 1972 issue of "The German Quarterly." Dr. Hook is also one of the authors of the monograph, "Goals," published recently by the Connecticut Council of Language Teachers.

Poplawski

Thomas G. Poplawski, a former member of the New Britain Police Department and the Connecticut State Police, has been named night supervisor of campus security. Poplawski attended Norwich University, where he studied mechanical engineering, and the University of Hartford and Manchester (Conn.) Community College where he studied police administration and science. He will be responsible for training the present staff and new security employees.

JOSEPH D. BRONZINO, associate professor of engineering and director of the bioengineering program at Rensselaer Polytechnic Graduate Center in Hartford, has been selected to appear in the 1972 edition of Community Leaders of America.

Report on Non-Traditional Study

In other areas where the IDP dovetails with the commission's thinking it is the product of joint administration-faculty planning; it has developed its own system of governance; care has been given to the staffing of the program; new admissions procedures have been developed for IDP students; alternative fee structures have been worked out; a special committee is attending to "quality control;" and the potential of new teaching techniques, such as cable television and other electronic tools, is being anticipated.

In general, the IDP fits well into the commission's definition of non-traditional study as "an attitude that puts the student first and the institution second, concentrates more on the former's need than the latter's convenience, encourages diversity of individual opportunity, and deemphasizes time and space or even course requirements in favor of competence and, where applicable, performance."

But there are other areas of non-traditional study toward which Trinity is not turning. Two key areas are the recommended deemphasis on degree programs in favor of what the commission calls "service to the learner," and the finding that most adults want to study vocational subjects, hobbies and recreation, and family life and personal development more than they want to study general education—the Liberal Arts curriculum which Trinity maintains.

In the first instance, Trinity has encouraged study chiefly for a larger purpose. While graduate courses can be taken without the necessity of enrolling for a degree, and the Alumni Audit Program, begun last year, encourages alumni in the area to audit graduate courses for only the cost of the registration fee ($10), the College still expects that the goal of most students who study here is a bachelor's or master's degree.

In the second instance, even the Commission recognizes that the demand for other types of education means that "most organized forms of adult learning will probably be sponsored by institutions other than colleges and universities." Trinity expects that this may be so, but remains confident about the value of the Liberal Arts curriculum as providing a student with "that kind of understanding of human experience which will equip him for life in a free society," as it is put in the faculty statement on "The Purpose of a Trinity Education."

Other recommendations of the Commission cannot be accomplished by individual institutions. They will need widespread support for implementation. Among these are establishment of a national registry to advise and evaluate students; a clearinghouse of information on non-traditional programs; integration of college programs with those offered by government, industry and other sponsors; and coordination of non-traditional programs within several institutions.

Trinity, then, is committed to the goal of making education available to more people, and in a way that overcomes some of the traditional obstacles to obtaining an education. But the College also sees its role as doing this in the context of the Liberal Arts, which it believes makes a continuing contribution to the creative spirit of mankind.

HISTORICAL SERVICES—Dr. E. LaB. Cherbonnier, left, Chaplain Alan C. Tull and Dr. William T. Bowie stand before a simple altar table, dressed in the second-century robes they wore to celebrate the eucharist according to the rite of Hippolytus, a presbyter of the Church of Rome at the end of the second century. The service, held in the Chapel on Feb. 4, was the first in a series of historical services to be celebrated this spring. The robes worn for the Rite of Hippolytus were replicas reconstructed from extant drawings. Other services in the series include: the Liturgy of St. John Chrysostom (4th-5th century), Feb. 11; the Liturgy of the Early Middle Ages, March 4; The Sarum Rite (14th century), March 11; The Reformation, April 8; The Georgian Period, April 29; and the Book of Common Prayer (1928), May 6. Chaplain Tull says the series has stirred much interest in the community.

Dr. GEORGE A. BOYCE is the author of three books. "Some People Are Indians" is being published by Vanguard Press. It is a book of modern Navajo Indian stories for teenagers. He is working on two others. One, about finished, is of various Indian tribes and contains "educational" short stories for teenagers: "Neither Red Nor White." The third is for adults and a footnote to history of the 1940's. The tentative title, nearly finished: "How Navajos Finally Got the Vote, Social Security and Schools," in which George played a large part. Now he needs two more publishers!

Congratulations to our good MARTIE and Letty, for on February 7 they entertained at a cocktail party the Trinity Alumni in the Palm Beach area. Included were our esteemed President LOCKWOOD, Alumni Secretary JOHN HEYL, and Mrs. Connie Ware who were Marty and Letty's house guests on this occasion. Thanks to Marty & Letty, 2T6 was singularly honored!

Congratulations also are very much in order to our good NORM and Jean PITCHER on the recent marriage of their dear daughter, Lorna. We are very grateful the Pitchers are happy in their new home in Florida: 115 South Maple Avenue, Lehigh Acres, 33936

We join with all Trinitarians at the loss of our excellent teacher and fine friend of all privileged to know, Dr. Louis Naylor. He came to teach at Trinity the fall we of 2T6 appeared on campus, so I am sure Our Class particularly expresses our profound sympathy and prayerful love to Louis' loved ones.

We hope MacBURNERY and his dear wife are enjoying the fine climate of Hawaii.

Always glad to hear from any of our good Classmates.

Anyone who would like to see his or her name in print will either have to spread rumors far enough to reach me in New Orleans, or simply send me a postcard with relevant news. Anyone who doesn't really care will still be able to reap much emotional enjoyment and pleasure out of reading about what the others are up to, I guess.

Pvt. MICHAEL DOWNS completed basic combat training at Fort Dix, New Jersey, and is now spending four months active duty in the Army Reserves. Upon the completion of his performance of his social conscience, Mike will again be unemployed.

MARK HASLETT is studying architecture at the Boston Center.

TOM TAMANEY is attending law school at Georgetown.

ROBERT D'AGOSTINO, DEAN HAMER and many others are studying medicine. Bob is in Farmington at the University of Connecticut, Dean is at Harvard, and the others are at others.

PETER GRANT is off the Trinity mailing list by his own request. (All the news that's fit to print!)

QUENTIN KEITH and his wife, the former KATHY McKAY, are living in Mansfield, Massachusetts.

JEFFREY MEADE, a management intern for GSA, U.S. Government, is living with none other than his wife, an elementary school teacher, in Arlington, Massachusetts.

BAYARD FIECHTER is with the Provident Bank in Philadelphia.

JAY (BEACHBALL) GOODWIN is skiing-and-being in Aspen, Colorado, near where he recently purchased 80 acres of land on which he plans to live with Margie Fleming after they are married in May. Congratualtions, Beachie!

CHARLIE YEAGER is doing quite well as a second-year student at LSU Law School.

DICK WALKER is attending law school at Temple.

DOUG SNYDER is working for International Harvester in Boston.

ELI ROBERTSON, PHIL NELSON and HAM CLARK are, of course, sailing the International Waterway to the Caribbean.

BOB FASS is now an assistant manager for a drug store chain in Philadelphia.

HARVEY ZENDT says he has "settled down for awhile," and is coaching wrestling at Penn Charter High School and teaching at Roman Catholic High School in Philadelphia, "the toughest Catholic school in the city."

I will close on a sad note by informing everyone who doesn't already know that GEORGE COYLE died while scuba diving last summer.

TRINITY SPORTS

Winter Sports Report; Cagers Rip Wes 88-56

Trinity's varsity basketball team broke out of a midseason slump with a rousing 88-56 upset victory over archrival Wesleyan.

Although the Bants had managed a 64-61 victory over the Cardinals in the season's opener, Trin had been unable to get back on track after a five week Christmas layoff and had suffered defeats to Middlebury (78-72), Union (67-55), and Williams (69-66) with its sole victory of the New Year coming against the Coast Guard (63-57).

The Wesleyan game found the Bants with only three victories in 10 decisions but a new fast-breaking offense installed by Coach Robie Shults, and led by a pair of exciting freshmen, produced Trin's finest performance to date. Frosh Wayne Sokolosky, who hails from Branford, Conn., and Jacksonville, Florida's Othar Burks combined for 30 points in the first half to give Trin a 48-25 lead at intermission. Trin was never behind, leading 26-9 after the first ten minutes.

Sokolosky poured in 24 points for the winners while Burks added 17 points to give this frosh duo a total of 41 points for the evening.

Trin narrowly missed pulling out a victory against Williams a few days earlier after fighting back from a 10-point deficit midway in the second half. Down 36-46, Trin outscored the Ephmen 13-2 over a four minute span to take a 49-48 lead but neither team was able to mount more than a two-point lead until the end of the game.

Trailing 68-64 with only twelve seconds left, co-captain Keith Klevan popped in a field goal but a Williams free throw left the final score at 69-66.

Junior forward Nat Williams led the squad in scoring against the Baystaters with 24 points and holds the team's leading scoring average with a 19.8 points per game average.

VARSITY SWIMMING

The highlight of the swimming season this winter was a come-from-behind 57-56 win over Union College.

The Bants, who have won only three of eight dual meets, scored seven points in the last race of the day—the 400 yd. freestyle relay—to edge the Dutchmen as seniors Dave Brown and Charlie Mack and freshmen Steve Cecil and Mike O'Brien turned in the winning performance.

Trin's other victories have come against Tufts (61-48) and Holy Cross (82-29) with its most recent defeats coming against the Coast Guard and MIT by identical 66-47 scores.

Senior Charlie Mack has regularly taken first place honors in the 50 yd. and 100 yd. freestyle events and is the team's top scorer with Captain Dave Brown and junior Ted Stehle close behind.

A newcomer to the Trin swimming team, Barbara Clark '76, became the first woman to compete on a former all-male athletic team at Trinity when she placed third out of six competitors in diving in a meet with the Coast Guard Academy on February 6.

VARSITY SQUASH

After dropping five of its first six matches, Trin's varsity squash team rallied to take six of seven contests in round-robin play on consecutive weekends.

In the first event, the Bants swept Bowdoin, Hobart and Wesleyan to take the John A. Mason Trophy. Senior Gary Plagenhoef won all three of his matches playing at the top spot for Trinity. Against Wesleyan, Trin not only defeated the Cardinals 9-0 but won each of the nine individual matches 3-0.

The following weekend, the racquetmen traveled to Middletown and won three of four matches losing only to Cornell (5-4) and defeating Wesleyan (9-0), Franklin and Marshall (6-3), and Stony Brook (6-3).

WOMEN'S SQUASH

The women's squash team has become one of the nation's top collegiate teams after only two years of competition.

Trin coeds have put together nine consecutive wins over two seasons and hold victories this winter against Vassar, Yale, Connecticut College, Smith, and Radcliffe.

In the Howe Cup, held at Yale, Jan. 26-28, the Trinity "A" team composed of the squad's top five competitors, led by Dusty McAdoo '74 and Karen Kahn '73, defeated four opponents—Dartmouth, Yale, Vassar, and U. Penn.—before losing to Princeton in the final. Trin's "B" won its division defeating opponents from the same five schools.

Coming up is the U.S. Women's Intercollegiate Squash Racquets Association Championships at Wesleyan, March 2-4.

Both Kahn and McAdoo reached the quarter-finals of the national championships held at Trinity last winter. This year's tourney director is Trinity coach, Jane Millsprague.

HOCKEY

With the season half over, Trinity's hockey club is holding its record just above the .500 mark with a 5-4-1 mark.

The Bants have recorded two wins since the Christmas break over Fairfield (13-2) and Bentley (4-1), losses to Holy Cross (10-7) and New Haven (3-1), and managed an overtime tie against the Yale J.V.'s (4-4).

Junior George Finkensteadt fired in two goals and Chris Wyle '74 and Jeff Ford '75 chipped one apiece in the Yale game while Goalie Charles Norris put in an outstanding performance making 51 saves.

Freshman Jim Lenhan is the team's top goal scorer with eight and is tied with soph Mark Cleary in the team scoring lead with 18 points each.

WINNERS AGAIN—Nicholas B. Mason (left) presents varsity squash captain Mal MacColl '73 with the John A. Mason Trophy. The Bants captured the trophy for a third straight year by sweeping the three opponents: Wesleyan (9-0), Hobart (6-3), and Bowdoin (6-3).

CLASS OF '76 TALENTED

The class of 1976 is quickly establishing itself as perhaps one of the finest group of athletes to come to campus in recent years. Last fall the freshman football team recorded an undefeated season and the soccer squad turned in a 6-2 mark. This winter's basketball and squash teams have a combined 14-3 record. The racquetmen have a good chance to become Trinity's first undefeated squash team on either the freshman or varsity level.

Whitney Cook's racquetmen have trounced all seven opponents this season, including identical 8-1 scores against Yale, Amherst and Wesleyan. The team has an abundance of talent illustrated by the fact that the seven top-seeded players on the team are all undefeated in match play. Leading the group is Charlie Stewart of Pittsburgh, Pa. followed by: Hobie Porter (Villanova, Pa.), Mal Owen (Brooklyn, N.Y.), Tim Cross (East Sandwich, Mass.), John Gates (Lake Forest, Ill.), Mike Moffit (Mechanicsburg, Pa.), and Tom Shultz (Hanover, Pa.).

Coach Bill Sferro has an equally fine contingent of freshmen on the basketball court. His biggest problem, however, is that his top players seem to be moving up to the varsity one by one. Freshman Wayne Sokolosky is perhaps the most talented of the lot and has worn a varsity jersey since the start of the season. He is currently the second highest individual scorer on the varsity squad with a 14-point-per-game average.

The frosh "lost" Othar Burks to the varsity after Christmas and the 6-1 guard has averaged nine points a game in his first five contests. Bo Pickard, a 6-3 center from East Greenwich Rhode Island, moved up just recently and added six points to Trin's 88-56 win over Wesleyan.

The true measure of the frosh team's depth of talent is that a new team leader seems to appear every time the squad loses a player. The latest is guard Bobby Williams who has averaged 24 points per game and had a 36-point performance against Williams to his credit and a record shattering 49-point total against Wesleyan.
